Review Meeting on media outreach activities held on 16th October 2025 at New Delhi

Union MoS for Cooperation, Shri Krishan Pal Gurjar, chaired a review meeting on 16th October 2025 to assess the progress of directions issued for enhancing media outreach and publicity in the cooperative sector at New Delhi. The discussions emphasized the need to strengthen communication, adopt innovative strategies, and amplify public engagement to align with the Ministry's objectives. He highlighted the potential of 'Bharat Organics', encouraging its promotion through the lens of health and wellness, and leveraging social media as the most effective platform to reach a wider audience. He further recommended creating short-form content like reels and YouTube videos to creatively showcase the Ministry's initiatives and their real-world impact. All officials and stakeholders were directed to develop a comprehensive action plan for greater social media presence and inclusive outreach among cooperative societies and beneficiaries. The meeting was attended by Shri Anand Kumar Jha, Joint Secretary, Shri Kapil Meena, Director, senior officials of the Ministry, and representatives from national-level cooperative federations.

The sessions aim to review ongoing efforts and foster collaboration among all stakeholders to further enhance the impact of cooperative initiatives across the country.

Ministry, NABARD chart revival plan for Co-operative Banks in Agri Credit

Dr. Ashish Kumar Bhutani, Secretary, MOC, chaired a high-level virtual meeting with NABARD to discuss the declining share of cooperative banks in agricultural credit and to explore strategic measures to reverse this trend on 24th October 2025 at New Delhi. During the meeting, Dr. Bhutani emphasized the need for strengthening the cooperative credit structure, enhancing digital and institutional capacities, and promoting policy interventions to increase the flow of agricultural credit through cooperatives. He also mentioned that cooperative banks-especially the three-tier structure comprising State Cooperative Banks (StCBs), District Central Cooperative Banks (DCCBs), and Primary Agricultural Credit Societies (PACS)-form the backbone of rural credit delivery. With their deep roots in villages and community-based approach, these institutions have historically ensured access to affordable finance for small and marginal farmers. However, their share in agricultural credit has eroded significantly in recent decades, necessitating immediate institutional and policy action. The participants reviewed the status of agricultural lending by cooperatives and discussed ways to modernize the cooperative credit structure through digital integration, professional training, and improved coordination across all levels. Recent studies highlight the depth of the problem. Cooperative banks' share in short-term agricultural credit, which was around 66% in 1995-96, dropped to about 59% by 2021-22, according to research published by NABARD. Other analyses show that their overall share in agricultural lending has fallen from nearly 86% in the early 1970s to below 20% in recent years. The decline has been attributed to a combination of factors-limited capital base, outdated technology, weak governance, and competition from commercial and regional rural banks. To reverse the trend, the meeting underscored four key strategies. First, the accelerated computerisation and digital linkage of PACS with district and state cooperative banks, an initiative already being implemented under the Centrally Sponsored Project for PACS Computerisation. Second, institutional capacity-building and staff training to improve risk management and governance. Third, targeted policy interventions and incentives to enhance cooperatives' ability to lend to small and marginal farmers. And fourth, diversification of PACS into non-credit activities-such as input supply, storage, and marketing to improve financial viability. The discussion reflected a shared understanding between MOC and NABARD that revitalising cooperatives is essential for achieving inclusive and sustainable agricultural growth, ensuring that the benefits of rural credit reach the farmers who need the most. The meeting was attended by Shri Pankaj Kumar Bansal, Additional Secretary, MOC; Shri Raman Kumar, Joint Secretary, MOC; Shri Shaji KV, Chairman, NABARD; along with senior officials from both organizations.
